Labouchere on the poverty of his client: "I had rather be poor than pick sixpences out of the gutter." Mr. Labouchere is a rich man; so rich that it is difficult to credit the charge often THE ANNUAL BENCH SHOW ATTRACTS A brought against him,-that he goes into these paroxysms of cruel slander in order to sell his paper. I do not believe it is that, nor that the mere physical shrinking from danger or abhorrence of bloodshed would induce him to censure those who are free from these peculiari-

Messrs. Lewis and Lewis, the eminent solicitors, write to the papers to say that Mr. Labouchere, their client, has spent $150,000 in defending himself against libel actions. It is, perhaps, a doubtful compliment. That he has performed some considerable public services in exposing impostors is not denied. His apologists always remind you of it in reply to all sorts of criticisms. It is his title to the gratitude of the public, and a setoff against the mischief he has done in politics by his want of seriousness, his flippant views, his cynicism, his contempt for convictions, his disbelief in principle, his inveterate habit of regarding politics as a game, and his theory that all men are actuated by base motives. He likes the character of amateur detective and the excitement of hunting down the game he has started. He seems also to have a kind of instinctive hatred of a man whose methods of dealing with money do not square with his own scruples. This, too, sells his paper, and his yearly income from "Truth" is about $50,000. But the costs of defending libel actions, whether successful or unsuccessful, must be larger than the profit of the alleged libels, and the motive must be sought elsewhere,-a good motive and not a bad one. For Mr. Labouchere as politician and Mr. Labouchere in private life are two very different individuals, and for the latter a great deal of good may be said.

One of the best misprints which has occurred for some time may be found in "The Times," apropos of the new "Revue de Paris." That periodical, we are told, is edited by "M. Gauderax Long, the able dramatic critic of the 'Revue des Deux-Mondes." The person in question is, as most readers of French literature would know, M. Gauderax, and the sentence as written | the entire length of the hall. The toy dogs and was: "M. Gauderax, long the able etc.," etc., etc. But some of the evering and provincial papers faithfully reprinted the error, and some of them added remarks of their own on "M. Long." The proof-reading on the English press is, as a rule, careful, and serious errors are infrequent, but even a proof-reader is human and therefore fallible at odd moments. G. W. DEATH OF A FAMOUS WOMAN.

MISS ANNA ELLA CARROLL PASSES AWAY IN HER SEVENTY-NINTH YEAR.

SHE WAS THE ACKNOWLEDGED AUTHOR OF THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN ADOPTED BY PRESIDENT LINCOLN IN 1861.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] Washington, Feb. 20.-One of the most remarkable women in American history died at the home of her sister in this city yesterday, at the age of seventy-eight years. Anna Ella Carroll, of Maryland, was the author of a plan which was characterized as that which "broke the backbone of the Rebellion." The character and magnitude of Miss Carroll's services to the United States are fairly described in the report from the Committee on Military Affairs submitted to the House of Representatives a few years ago by General Edward S. Bragg, of Wisconsin. The committee's report was the unanimous expression of the members of that body, and from it the following brief extracts are made:

"In the autumn of 1921 the great question as to whether the Union could be saved or whether it was hopelessly subverted depended upon the ability of the Government to open the Mississippi and de-liver a fatal blow upon the resources of the Con-federate power. The original plan was to reduce diverted up the Tennessee River, and thence south ward to the centre of the Confederate power.

"The evidence before this committee completely ment. establishes that Miss Anna Ella Carroll was the uthor of the change of plan, which involved a transfer of the National forces to their new base in Northern Mississippi and Alabama, in command of the Memphis and Charleston Rallroad. The effect the Memphis and Charleston Raliroad. The effect of this campaign upon the country and the anxiety to find out and reward the author are evidenced by the resolution of Mr. Roscoe Conkling in the House of Representatives. 24th of February, 1862. But it was deemed prudent to make no public claim as to the authorship while the war lasted. The wisdom of the plan was proven not only by the absolute advantages which resulted, giving the mastery of the conflict to the National arms and evermore assuring their success, even against the Powers of Europe should they have combined, but it was likewise proven by the failures to open the Mississippi or win any decided success on the plan first devised by the Government.

by the Government.

"It is further conclusively shown that no plan, order, letter, telegram or suggestion of the Tennessee River as the line of invasion has ever been specified in the paper submitted by Miss produced except in the paper submitted by Miss Carroll on November 39, 1861, and her subsequent letters to the Government as the campaign progressed. It is further shown to this committee that the able and patriotic publications of memorialist, in pamphlets and newspapers, with her high social influence, not only largely contributed to the cause of the Union in her own State, Maryland, but exerted a wide and saintary influence on all the border States. These publications were used all the border States. These publications were used all the border States. These publications were used line Government. Leading statesmen and jurists bore testimony to their value, including President Lineoln, Secretaries Chasse, Stanton, Seward, Welles, Smith, Attorney-deneral Bates, Senatora Browning, Doollitic, Collamer, Cowan, Reverdy Johnson and Hicks, Hon. Honace Binney, Hon. Senjamin H. Brewster, Hon. Honace Binney, Hon. Renjamin H. Brewster, Hon. William M. Meredith, Hon. Robert J. Walker, Hon. Charles O'Conor, Hon. Echwards Pierrenont, Hon. Edward S. Willard.

But notwithstanding this favorable report Contracts by a peere yet granted seamuparation to Miss.

Charles O'Conor. Hon. Edwards Pierrepont, Hon. Edward Everett, Hon. Thomas Corwin, Hon. Francis Thomas, of Maryland, and many others found in the memorial."

But notwithstanding this favorable report Congress has never yet granted remuneration to Miss Carroll for the valuable services rendered by her. President Lincoln remarked to Congressman William Mitchell that 'this Anna Eila Carroll is the head of the Carroll race. When the history of this war is written she will stand a good bit tailer than ever old Charles did."

Miss Carroll was a descendant of the famous Charles Carroll of Carrollton. She was a grand-daughter of Henry James Carroll, who married the beautiful daughter of Sir Thomas King, and her father was Governor Thomas King Carroll, who married Miss Juliana Stevenson, a daughter of Dr. Henry James Stevenson, a prominent physician of Ealtimore. Miss Carroll was born at the home of her father, Kingston Hall, Somerset County, Maryland, Her body was taken to-day to the eastern shore of Maryland. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at Trinity Church, near Cambridge, Dorchester County.

The surviving members of Governor Carroll's family are Dr. Thomas King Carroll, of Cambridge, Md.; Miss Mary Henry Carroll and Mrs. Ada Carroll Bowdle, of this city; Mrs. Sarah Carroll Craddock, of Pikesville, near Baltimore, and Mrs. Henrietta Stevenson Gibson, of Talbot County, Md.

YESTERDAY.

TRIBUNE FUND-DISTRIBUTIONS AT INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

The Tribune Coal and Food Fund's card was displayed yesterday in Industrial School No. 2, at No. 418 West Forty-first-st., and thirty-six poor families who were reported worthy by Mrs. E. A. Smith received grocaries. The distributing point is situated in a part of the city where the hard times and the severe weather have made themselves terribly feit, and the thirty-six women who came for groceries were woful pictures of want. One woman with three small children was reported as "all hungry-no food, no fire, no work." Another: "Five children, husband til a long time-no work; very needy." A third: "This woman has five children and no work for any; they are painfully poor and worthy." Further down the list is a woman who was reported as "very needy, has five children, all small, and her husband is mentally incapaci-

"A widow with three children, dependent on her own exertions, unable to find work," was one of those who came for groceries, and, after her in line, a neat little woman, "the only bread-winner in a large family. The father is an invalid, as is one of the children." The next woman in line was a widow who "does washing and scrubbing to eara Signor Campanini had enlisted to give brilliancy to a living for four little ones. She has very little work, and they are poor indeed."

"Two boys do their best to keep this family alive, consisting of mother and seven children, was the note opposite one woman's name; "but there is nothing to eat in their house; they are there is nothing to eat in their noise, they cold and destitute."

"An occasional day's work at washing," said one woman to a Tribune reporter, "is all the work done in our family, and I have six children to support."

"And your husband?" was asked. The old share was pulled a little lower down on the face, but not far enough to conceal the tears which came with the answer: "He is dead."

"A girl of seventeen is the only support of this family," is the memorandum opposite the name of a woman who said: "My husband is unable to do any work—has been ill with rheumatism a long any work—has been ill with rheumatism a long.

dren."

The next case was that of a widow with six children, of whom the oldest a girl, of sixteen, has work, and with what she has brought to the wretched home, the others had been barely kept alive. These are fair samples of the beneficiaries of The Tribune Fund at yesterday's distribution under Mrs. Smith's theories.

SUICIDE OF A MAN OUT OF WORK.

Charles Hand keeps a boarding house at No. 327
West Twenty-eighth-st. About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the boarders were startled by two pistol shots, fired in rapid succession. The shots counsed from one of the upper floors, licaded by Hand, the boarders who occupied the lower floors | From The Springfield Republican, to search all the rooms on the top floor, having concluded that one of his boarders had committed suicide. The last room eigened was that of George A. Mott, a young cigar sale-man, who had lived in the house for more than six years. He was found unconscious on the floor, with a buildet wound in the left side of the head. An archibitance was hurriedly called, but he died before it arrived. Policeman Grey, of the West Thickyseventheat, station, was then called in, and he examined the room. There was not a sarap of paper found that would tend to explain why Mott had killed himself. Mr. Hand thought it was because he had not been able to secure employment for the last four months. The young rean had been out during the day, seeking work as usual, and returned home about an hour before he killed himself. The first builtet he first missel its mark and entered the woodwork of the door. From the position in which the holy was found, it aspected that the suitche had stood in front of a milror when he first the shots. Mott was thirty years old and unmarried. SIGNOR CAMPANINI'S CONCERT.

As such things go, Signor Campanini's concert at the Music Hall last night was a notable affair.
The Signor has a host of friends in New-York who are as unwilling as he to admit that his voice is no longer what it used to be, and they turned out in the musical end of the affair. These singers were Mile. Caivé, Signorina Pettigiani, MM. and Si-grori Lussalle, Edward de Reske, Campanari and Bologna. Signor Campanini also sang, and the symphony orchestra, led by Walter Damrosch, provided the accompaniments and a few incidental instrumental numbers. Mr. Victor Harris was the planeforte accompanist, and since everybody was planoforte accompanist, and since everybody was called on to sing twice as many numbers as the programme called for he was kept busy. There were surprisingly few of those changes of programme which are conventional at operatic construction of the surprisingly few of the audience was asked in behalf of Mile. Calvé, who postponed her appearance till the second part of the concert, on the pleas of weariness from the unexpected call upon her strength at the opera on Monday evening. She was generally felt to be the chief attraction of the evening, though the hearts of the veteran operations beat high when Campanini, Lassalle and De Reske sang the trio from "William Tell."

THE APPOINTMENT OF JUSTICE WHITE.

AN UNBECOMING QUARREL ENDED. From The Washington Post.

The country will be glad to know that a most unbecoming quarrel is ended. Mr. Cleveland has done well in absenting himself in this matter from a State feul with which the country at large has already become impatient, and selecting an appointment wholly outside of the atmosphere of a personal quarrel.

IS IT A SOP TO THE SUGAR PLANTERS? From The Providence Journal.

Now the question arises whether the Democrats of Louisiana will accept the honor conferred upon them in the person of Senator White as a sufficient compensation for the loss of the sugar bounty, as provided in the Wilson bill, and so refrain from assailing that clause in the measure when it comes before the Senate.

NEW-YORK MUST MAKE THE BEST OF IT. From The New-York World. As for New-York, the State must make the best of a situation that is unfortunate from whatever point it may be viewed. NOT A CREDITABLE INCIDENT.

From The Newark Advertiser.

It reflects not a particle of credit on the Senate, and not a particle of credit on a stubborn, obstinate, egotistical and seif-sufficient President. It was never designed by our Constitution that the pregative of choosing a member of the Supreme Court should devolve entirely upon the Senate, and yet this is precisely what has happened since Clevelland first sent to the Senate the name of Mr. Hornblower, and later that of Mr. Peckham.

From The Pittsburg Dispatch.

Senator White was one of the Louisiana Senators who was supposed to base his vote against protection at large on the consideration of special protection for Louisiana sugar planters. Is his removal to the Paperine Bench intended to remove the disturbing factor of his vote, or, if his successor is appointed prior to the vote in the Senate, will the discontent in Louisiana cause the new Senator to be more pronounced and independent in his opposition to free trade?

The "Grent Western" Brand of Champagne THE PRESIDENT FAILED IN HIS DUTY.

From The Evening Post.

It is a great misfortune that the President did not stand his ground and win this victory. The sentence of McKane to State Prison should have been accompanied, as it might have been, by the elevation to the Supreme Bench of some man who helped to overthrow Maynardism. We cannot but feel that the President has falled to do his duty in making this surrender.

HE OUGHT NOT TO HAVE SWERVED.

Having once made the Issue, the President should have held on. His position was unassallable. It was important to know, and the country wanted to know, whether the personal feelings of a few Senators were to be final in the matter of appointments—whether or not Senators held the right to distribute the public patronage for their respective States and act in this wise as deouty Presidents.
